ERROURS
And INDURATION,
ARE
The Great Sins and the Great
Judgements of the Time.
Preached in a SERMON
Before the Right Honourable
House of Peers, in the Abbey-Church at Westminster, July 30. 1645.
the day of the Monethly Fast:
By ROBERT BAYLIE, Minister at Glasgow.

2 Thess. 2. 10, 11, 12. Because they received not the love of the Truth, that they might be saved; God shall send them strong delusions that they should believe a Lye; that they all might be damned who believed not the Truth.
Matth. 7. 15. Beware of false Prophets, which come to you in sheeps clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.
Matth. 15. 14. Let them alone, they be blinde Leaders of the Blinde: and if the Blinde lead the Blinde, both shall fall into the Ditch.

FOR
The Equitable READER.

Howsoever I have not adventured to offer unto the Right Honourable House of Peers any Dedicatorie Epistle, having taken up alreadie so much of their precious time, in their patience and favourable audience of my (prolix enough) Sermon: Yet presuming upon thy courteous who shalt be willing to reade the subsequent Notes of that which to their Honours was preached, without any variation: I have made bold to speak in thy cares (as the custome is) some words of a Preface.

As the first instant of my calling to this service, the words of my Text were cast into my minde, where they remained without my least inclination towards any other, till I had delivered from them what followeth. I have been for a long time in the opinion, that Error and Induration are, albeit not the only, yet among the principall, both sins and miseries of this time and place.
The sinfulness of Induration.

Hardness of heart is ever a sin, but then most sinfull, when most unseasonable. If ever there was a time to weep, this must be it, when not only the mouth of the Lord from his Word is calling, but his hand also from the Heaven is drawing us to it. He is a stubborn child, from whose eye the rod of the Father can draw no water: It is a hard stone which the hammer cannot break: It is a piece of unnatural metal with the fire cannot dissolve. And yet this is the complaint of the best discerning Christians every where. That though the Lord at this instant be dealing with us by his rod, the hammer, the fire of his judgements; we are so far from heart-melting, that in this extraordinary and untimorous hardness of our heart, more of the wrath and judicial hand of God doth appear, then in any, or in all our judgements beside.

This plague of the Lord, on the spirits not only of the World, but of many his dear children, ought to be the subject of our deepest groans, and loudest cries to the Heaven, whence alone the remédic of this our spirits disease can come: For there is but one Father, and one Lord, and one Physician of the spirits of men. My weak endeavours towards this great Cure, must be fruitless, till his hand make the application of these prescriptions, which with all the faithfulnesse and care I was able for the time, I have collected only out of the book of his own method of Physick.

As for the other evil of Error; it hath been the studie and work of some here and elsewhere to extenuate the sinfulness thereof, and to arm the conscience of all they could persuade, against the sense of its burthen; as, if the conscience ought to be impenetrable and secure from all Wounds which vice and fleshly lusts do not inflict. But I believe, if Error and Vice were well weighed in the ballance of the Sanctorarie, though you put to vice the grossest aggravations, whereby the passions of the soul, and actions of the bodie make it justly abominable: yet if you will allow to Error but the grains of its ordinarie circumstances, especially that one of our Text, Induration, its most familiar companion; it will be found to have such a weight of malignitie, that if betwixt the two any inequality do appear, the sinfulness of the last will preponder.

The intoxication of the spirit of the minde by the venome of Error.
Errours, is as much contrary to the Divine Nature and Will, is as much hatefull to the Spirit of light and truth, and as evidently damnable, as the corruption of the will, and inferior affections, or any member of the body with whatsoever vice, or more bodily transgression. I hope I have proved this by places of Scripture unanswerable.

Whence it necessarily followeth, that it is more, at least no lesse unlawfull for a Christian State to give any libertie or toleration to Errours, then to set up in every Citie and Parish of their Dominions, Bordels for Uncleanesse, Stages for Playes, and Lists for Duels. That a libertie for Errours is no lesse hatefull to God, no lesse hurtfull to men, then a freedome without any punishment, without any discouragement, for all men, when and wherefover they pleased, to kill, to steal, to rob, to commit adultery, or to do any of these mischiefs, which are most repugnant to the Civill law, and destructive of humane societie.

But that which my Text points at in Errours, is not so much their sinfullnesse, as their judgement; That God in his wrath had given over that people to errour. If ever the plague of erring from the wayses of truth was sent upon a land, it seems this day to lye upon us. The Finger of God in this our judgement, is demonstrable by divers Characters, imprinted upon the face of our present Errours, above all that in ordinarie (and not judiciaall Errours) useth to appear. 1 point at four eminent singularities in them: Their various multiplicity, Their palpable evidence, Their incredible increase, and in the midst of universall complaints against them, A total neglect of their cure.

First, their variety is prodigious; I cannot say that all which stand in the ancient Hereofeologies of Philaftrius, Epiphanius, or Augustine, can be found among us, or were ever to be found upon Earth in any one age; But this may be confidently averred, That more Errours have set up their head, and shewed their mis-shapen countenances lately here, then in any one place of the world this day are known. I add, that there is not any Errour spoken of in the places most infamous for that evill, whether Amsterdam, or Pole, or Transilvania, and if you please to joyn all the three... three in one, but all are among us, and divers more, then in any of the places mentioned were ever heard of.

2. By their grossenesse.

Their evidence in this to me seems palpable; that however at their first appearance they did waken a great expectation, by their faire promises of New-Light, of New-found-Truths, of New-ways leading to extraordinary pieties: yet after a little inspection and commerce to un-engaged and im-prejudicate minds, they are found to be no other, but the very same dead carcasses of old Heresies and Schisms, which by the happie labours of the Reformed Divines in this and other Churches, lay buried in their grave of oblivion and abomination, till their late infant resurrection.

So it is in the Canterburians

That new Canterburian-Protestantisme which the other day so much bewitched the Court and Country, is now seen to have been nothing but masked Popery, but a high path-royall way to Rome, a Schoole of Idolatry, Heresie, Treachery, and merciless bloodshed.

The Antinomians.

These Gospell-truths, these sweet Sermons of Free-grace, that setting up of naked Christ on his Throne, which hath seduced so many thousands of well-meaning souls, do now appear in their own colours, and to any common eye may be seen to be nothing but the grosse Antinomy of the old Libertines.

The Anabaptists.

These innocent scruples of tender consciences only about the grounds of Pede-baptisme, whether have they now led some millions, not of the worst of our people? See we not, that without any leave so much as asked of the Magistrate, very great numbers of Churches are erected by them, of forswall and avowed Anabaptists.

The Libertines.

These specious and popular Invectives against Tyrannie and Persecution; those plausible Harangues for a liberty only to examine, without prejudice, What was proposed under the name of a Divine Truth; Whether, at last, hath it carried multitudes who esteem themselves among the most rational of men? Have they not opened, in the midst of our streets, the old Pantheon of Paganishe Rome; resolutely asserting an absolute Freedom for Turks, Jews, Pagans, Papists, and if
if there be any worse Religions, not onely to live in all quietness among us, but to be permitted, without any Discouragement, to follow their Consciences; and so to employ themselves daily, in the most advantagious places, private or publicke, with so much art and diligence as they can use, to draw all the World toward their Wicked Professions?

And not to run out upon all the rest of our old renewed Errors, that so much-extolled Independence, Wherein many dents. Religious souls for the time do Wander, which is the chief hand that opened at first, and keepeth open to this day the door to all the other Errors that plague us: What is it else but a Limb, or rather, the large half of the Body of old Brownism? as its own Patrons confesse, a middle Way betwixt the Reformed Churches and the Brownists; the same Way Which Morellius (seduced by the Dutch Anabaptists) did labour to bring into FRANCE; but by Bza and Sadaell, in two Generall Assemblies, it was so fully confuted, that to this day all the Churches thre do detest it: Yet Bolton and Brown would needs bring it into ENGLAND.

These two are the known Fathers of English Independence; men whose Inventions cannot be much loved, for their authors sake, when they are well known. Among all the Protestant Divines that ever ENGLAND bred, I doubt if Robinsons Judas any have been more scandalous either in life or death, then the Apolog. nar. two former, as their chief followers are forced to acknowledge. Few Prelaticall men have gone beyond Brown in Profanity, from his Youth to his Old-age: And Judas himself was no more abominable than Bolton in his death.

I have oft marvelled how the Invention of so infamous Authors could be entertained by men of understanding, especially since God did openly brand that their Conception with the Marks of his Displeasure, not onely in its Birth, but in all the passages of its Life, wherever yet it hath set foot on ground.

The fruits of Bolton and Brown's Independence, at Amsterdam have been so eminently scandalous, that its own friends can find no cover of excuse for them.

Edwards Ant. capol.

The Divisions and Rents that sprang from the same root when it was planted in some better ground, at Arnhem and Rotterdam, have been no lesse unhappie and bitter.

But that which demonstrates the Genuine Nature of this Plant, is its fruits in New-England, where, without any Incumbrance from without or from within, having all the Advantages Civil and Ecclesiastick which could be wished; it got leave to put out its full strength. In a short time there, it brought forth such a multitude of grosse Heresies and Divisions, as did threaten not the Churches alone, but the Civil State also with a total Ruine.

If our Hopes of it here may be much better, for any of its fruits which yet we have tasted, wise men will pronounce.

3. By their increase.

The third Character wherewith the Finger of God has stigmatized the Errours of this place, is, Their Incredible increase: It can hardly be shewn where Errour, in so short a time, hath made so great a Conquest: For however, as I am informed, all the Fowls that yet have made their Nest in the last Branch whereof we did speak, may easily be numbed, being no ways so many as some would make them; yet if ye look upon the whole Tree in all its Branches, it will be found to have drawn under its Shadow a marvellous multitude of Creatures. These last four yeers, it seems, more people here have made Apostacie to one Errour or other, of their own accord, without the violence of any Persecution, then in all the Reformed Churches together for an hundred yeers and above. Errour of it self is of no such conquering strength, did not the Justice of God give men over to be captivated by its Delusions.

4. By mens neglect of their Cure.

The fourth Demonstration of a Divine Judgement in our Errours, is this, That though they have been universally acknowledged and regrated, yet to this day their effectuall Cure hath been wel neer universally neglected. It is now not Moneths, but Yeers, since upon the faithfull Warning of the Lords Messengers, all men, every where, have joyned to acknowledge and to professe their displeasure at the spreading of Errour over the face face of this Land: No Societies more full of these Complaints than the three most Considerable, The two Honourable Houses, and The Reverend Assembly: But yet, after all these Regrets, What real Stop hath been made to the Current of this over-flowing Deluge?

These are a great part of our Judgements; which the godly, in the days of Humiliation, and when else their hearts are loosed to mourn, do deplore. Yet here is our Comfort, That, in answer to our Supplications, the Lord hath stirred up the hearts of those who have power effectually to minde that Which we are confident will prove the Remedy of these and many more of our present Evils; I mean, The setting up, without further Delay, of the Lords Government in his own House, over all the Land.

The whole Government being transmitted from the Assembly, and looked upon by both Houses with a gracious Aspect, and sundry Votes already past upon the chief parts thereof; it is certainly expected, that in a very short time the whole Frame shall be erected, and not onely be accompanied with the joyful Acclamations of this Land, and of all the Churches abroad; but also filled with so much Grace and Power from the presence of the Lord, as shall prove an heavenly Attractive, without any need of humane violence, to draw the spirits of those who for the time do most dissent and oppose, to its admiration and love. Waiting and praying for the sight of that happie day,

I rest,

Thy Servant,

in the Lord,

R. B.
A Sermon preached before the Right Honourable the House of Lords, July 30. 1645.

Isai. 63. 17.
Lord, why hast thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our hearts from thy fear? Return for thy servants sake, the Tribes of thine Inheritance.

In this and the two next Chapters, we have a heavenly Conference and Dialogue betwixt Christ and the Church of Israel, in the time of her affliction in Babel.

The Dialogue hath Three or Six parts: Three Questions of the Church, and Three Answers of Christ.

In the first verse of this Chapter, we have the first Question and Answer. The Church, about that time of the Captivity to which this part of the Prophecy relateth, was much oppressed with many Enemies. God, after all his wrath, begins to arise, and take order with them who long had devoured her; especially with Edom, the neerest and most bitter Enemy of Jacob. When she sees the sudden and unexpected Vengeance on Edom, admiring who could be the author.
author and worker of it, she proposes the Question, Who he was that had destroyed Bozra, the principall City of the Edomites, and was marching in his great and glorious strength from the Land of Edom, the service there being ended, to other of the Enemies Countreys.

Unto the Churches Interrogation, Christ answers, That it was he himself, who now, by his works, was demonstrating the truth of his ancient promises, and shewing the might of his power to save his people from the Enemies oppression.

Observe, When the Church hath wrestled long with her enemies, and is ready to faint and give over; on a sudden, Christ, the King and Captain of the Host of Israel, comes down, and breaks the strength of the prevailing enemy; to the Church her great admiration.

The Church finding it was her Lord and God who was begun to take vengeance on her enemies; before he go, she is desirous of more conference with him, and proposes a second Question, Wherefore his Garments were red, as if he had been treading a Press of red wine?

The Lords Answer is, That the set time of his Vengeance upon her Enemies was come: That though her strength was gone, and among all her friends there was none able to stand against her foes; yet he alone would do it, and by his own Arm had destroyed already some of them with so great a slaughter, that all his glorious Raiment was stained with the blood of the slain.

Hence observe, first, When the condition of the Church is most desperate upon earth, then is the day and hour of her certain redresse from heaven.

The Church, deserted of herself and all men else, hath one fast friend, who alone is worth many Ten thousands, able to draw her out of all deeps.
In the day of the Lords anger, wo to all the enemies of the Church. When the Lord begins to trample them in the Winepress of his Indignation; if there were no more but the dashing of their bodies in pieces, the watering of the ground with their blood, and the staining of the garments of their killers therewith; if no more followed, it were well to them: But they must drink after death in the Cup of the everlasting fury of the Almighty, as John comments it, Rev. 14.10. They shall be tormented with fire and brimstone for ever and ever.

In the third part of the Dialogue from the seventh verse, the Church finding her Deliverance sensibly begun, but not accomplished (for though Edom was destroyed, yet Babel was sitting like a Queen over the Nations, and most over the rubbish of desolate Jerusalem) she turns her self to her present Redeemer, and most humbly supplicates him to perfect what he had begun, To deliver her fully from the great burdens both of sin and misery that yet lay upon her. This Prayer is set down in the remnant of this Chapter, and all the next; whereunto a large and gracious Answer is returned by Christ in the 65 Chapter, throw the whole.

The first part of the Prayer is Thanksgiving, from the seventh to the fifteenth.

To prepare their hearts for petitioning, they lay out before the Lord the great goodness which he of old had bestowed on the house of Israel, his wonders in Egypt, his glorious works at the Red Sea and in the Wilderness, the constancy of his kindnesse, notwithstanding their Rebellion and vexing of his Spirit: Though sometime he punished them for their sins, yet he never left them, for the glory of his Name, and the Multitude of his mercies: Not only Moses his Shepherd, but the Angel of his Presence went before them: He was afflicted in all their afflictions; he bare them, and carried them in his arms all these days of old thorow that howling Wilderness. This is the Churches Preface to her subsequent Prayer.

Hence observe, first, Thanksgiving is the meetest utterance which the first Doctrine.
A Petitioner can have to the Throne of Grace. Praise perfumes the lips of a Suppliant; it sweetens, it softens, it opens the heart of a Seeker, and fits it singularly to receive all its desires from God.

The second.

The kindness of God in the days of Moses, and the most ancient times, is the Churches Inheritance to the Worlds end. All the favours of God registred in Scripture, all the gracious experiments of the Saints in any time, in any place, are our Patrimony, serving as ruled Cases, to strengthen our Faith, Hope and Patience in the days of our adversity.

The third.

The sins of many persons, remove not the favour of God from an elect Nation. There is no interruption of the course of mercy towards a People, by the destruction of many particular persons. Great Vengeance may be upon Thouands, the carcasses of Ten thousands may fall in the Wilderness, even of Moses himself, and many of the Shepherds both of Church and State; and yet the Lord may graciously march on before his People, till he have setled them and his Ark in peace on his holy mountain.

The second member.

The Prayer consists of Petitions, Complaints, Confessions of sin, Professions of faith, intermixed one with another, as the holy passions of the Supplicants hearts do mix them.

In the fifteenth verse, there is a Petition backed with a Complaint. The Lord for a long time had left his People to the outrages of their Enemies, he had as it were left the earth, gone up to the heaven, and miskent all that the Enemy had done to his People: Now therefore they petition that he might be pleased to look down upon them from his holy and glorious Throne in the heaven. For this is the strange faith of the Church, That she is persuaded so far of the power and goodnesse of her God, at that very time when he hath left her to sink in misery for her offences; that even then, if he would but look back to her, in never so far a distance; if from the very heaven, the place of his retiring, he would behold her on the earth overwhelmed with misery; she is hopefully, if she come but in the sight of her gracious gracious Lord, he would not fail to take pity upon her, and deliver her.

To this Petition, a Complaint is subjoined, of the restraint and withdrawing of God's ancient favours: Sometimes his zeal and strength had been employed in her defence, his mercies, the tender bowels of his compassions, had been extended towards her; but now all sense of such favours were away.

This complaint, left it should irritate, is presently corrected in the sixteenth Verse, with a fair profession of Faith, above and against all present sense, however the beams of God's loving countenance did not then shine upon them, as at some other time; yet they professe their certain persuasion, that God was their Father. Though Abraham and Israel, and all their bodily Progenitors should cast them away, as unworthy to be counted their children; yet they did believe, that their everlasting and unchangeable God would not cast them off, but deal with them as children, notwithstanding all their misdeavors.

As for the words in hand in the seventeenth Verse, the Church goes on to powre out her spirit before him, whom she believes to be her Father, in the midst of all her afflictions, in a new complaint and petition. The complaint hath two parts, and the petition is backed with a twofold Reason: The first part of the complaint is in these words, O Lord, why hast thou made us erre from thy wayes? the second part in these, why hast thou hardned our hearts from thy fear? The petition is, that he would return after his long absence. The first reason, They were his servants; the second, They were his inheritance. Let us consider severally, the minde and use of every part.

As for the first part of the complaint, four things in it would be expounded: First, What are the wayes of the Lord. Secondly, What it is to erre from his wayes. Thirdly, How God makes men erre from his way. Fourthly, How the Church complains of this divine action. Three of these particulars are easie, and may be dispatched in a word, but in the fourth there is no little difficulty.
For the first; Gods wayes here, are his Commandments, full of holinesse and righteousness; they are called Gods wayes, because of their similitude with his nature, that is, holy, righteous, and true: All his Commandments, and conversation, are according to the strait rule of his eternall, and essentiaall holinesse, righteousness and truth. Secondly, Because they are his Law and Prescription, his will prescribes them as a way to his creatures to walk in. Thirdly, Because of his presence therein, in that way he is to be found: He is graciously present, and doth conntenance all that walk into it. Fourthly, Because of their end; they lead to God, they are the strait way, wherein the godly walk, till they come to the glorious palace above.

The second point, To erre from these wayes, is to sin, as it is expressed Psal. 119. 8, 10. To wander from Gods Commandments. When we leave Gods way, and run out on the right hand, or the left, to the wayes of our own blinde minde, and corrupted heart; our false opinions against Gods truth; our wicked inclinations and actions against his holy nature, and revealed will; all of this kinde is our erring from his wayes.

But the great difficulty is in the third, How the Lord causes us to erre from his way: This would seem to make God the cause and author of sin, which is a horrid blasphemy, against many Scriptures, and all reason. To eschew this huge, great, and intolerable inconvenience, sundry famous interpreters do translate the originall otherwayes then we read it; Not, Why haft thou made or caused us to erre? but, Why haft thou suffered or permitted us to erre? So Junius an excellent translator: And many hundred yeers before him, the Chaldee Paraphrafit did render it, Why haft thou cast us away to erre from thy wayes? This interpretation is approved by very Learned and Orthodox Divines, who bring this reason for it, That the Hebrew word here, is not simply in the active form, not in Kal, but, as they speak, in Hiphil, whose signification oftentimes is not to make or cause, but to permit.
Indeed, this translation doth eschew fully the difficulty; yet we dare not venture upon it; for as it seems it were to make too bold with the Scripture. The Septuagins, the ancient Latin, the French, the Dutch, the Italian, and many more, reads it just as our English, Why hast thou made us to err from thy ways? The Grammaticall reason alleaged, hath no strength in this place; for be it so, that Hebrew Verbs in Hiphil, sometime have a permisive, and not an active sense; though this in any word is very rare, and the examples alleaged, are very questionable; yet for the Hiphil of the word in hand, we deny that ever it can be so exponed. A number of places of Scripture may be produced where Hithah must be actively exponed, as here our translators read it; but not one, if it be not this in question, can be brought where it may be exponed of a meer permission, without some agency and operation upon the erring and seduced person. We dare not trust the solving of so weighty a difficulty upon such a meer Grammatication.

Holding therefore to our vulgar translation, How does God cause us to err, and yet is not the Author of our errors? For the understanding hereof, we must distinguish sin, and the actions of God about sin. In sin there are two things, albeit inseparably joined, yet essentially distinct; The matter and form, the act and its pravity; the one is naturally good, the other morally evil: This is visible in two actions whose matter is the same, but the forms much different: For example, the stoning of Naboth, and the stoning of Achan; the substance of the actions, the casting of the stones at both was the same; but the forms was much different: The casting at an innocent man, and at a man condemned by God, and all Israel; the one form makes the stoning of Naboth an act of unjust murder, the other form makes the stoning of Achan, an act of just punishment.

The acts, not of Gods will and decrees, for such concern not the words in hand, but of his actual providence about the matter and form of sin, are many: The most considerable of these to us, for opening of our Text, are three: The matter of a sinfull action must be distinguished from its form.

His
His concourse, his efficacious permission, his judicial tradition, so to speak.

For the first, the Lord hath an actual, yea, an active concourse; and if you will, an efficiency in every act of sin, so far as concerns the substance or matter of the sinfull action; for in him we live, we move, and have all our being, in the most sinfull action, the matter of the act being a positive entity, it must be a naturally-good thing, and have its existence from the first and univerfall mover, the fountain of all Being: Without this kinde of efficiency and concourse, Shimei could not have moved his tongue to curse David, nor Doeg drawn his sword to have killed the Priests: When God denies this kinde of concourse, sin is necessarily stopped: When he removes the life of the two Captains, they cannot oppressc Elia. When God leaves the life, but takes away the sight from the Sodomites at Loth's door, and the power from the arm of Jeroboam, their sin is impedite. When by suspending of his operation, he takes away the will from David to kill Nabal, though both life and power remained, the sin is marred. But for such kinde of working in the sinner, and cooperation with the sinfull act, Sin uses not to be ascribed to God, more then the generation of living Creatures, to the motion and influence of the Heavens; for effects are denominate from the second and particular causes, not from the first and univerfall, though their efficiency and concourse be never so necessary and certain.

The next action of God about sin is, his efficacious permission: This for its object, hath not onely the matter and substance of the sinfull act, but its very form, its pravity, its anomaly, its sinfullnesse: This malignant quality is a morall evill, and so cannot be of God, who is goodness it self; its a privation and defect, and so the cause of it is not efficient, but deficient. If we would render the cause of a lame mans crooked walking, we behoved to distinguish betwixt the walking, and its crookednesse: The walking we would ascribe to the motive power of the mans soul, and to the instruments of motion in his body; but the crookednesse of it, it to the defect and hurt of some instrument of motion, not to the soul, or to the faculty, or to the instrument of motion, but only to some defect of the instrument. So the sinfulness of sin is to be ascribed not to any efficiency of God, but to the deficiency of man's will, which now is sinfull, and before sin, was weak, as being made of nothing, and so able to change it self from good to evill; but however, the sinfulness of sin cannot be charged on God's either efficiency or deficiency, yet it must exist by his free permission; for nothing can have any existence in the world, any being in the dominion of God, without the leave and permission of the great Lord and Master of the World.

That action of God which in respect of sin is called a This is really permission, in regard of the sinner is a desertion: This con- one thing with sidered, will help to clear that which is the hardesst knot in this matter; the efficacy that is said to be in the permission, and yet without all efficacy of the permitter, in the sinfulness permitted.

This matter which naturally is exceeding dark, will be best seen in similitudes: When the Sun goes down, the darkness of the night necessarily doth follow; when the Sun declines towards the Southern signes of the Zodiac, the Winter blasts certainly do come on; the Sun the fountain of light and heat, in propriety of speech, cannot be called the cause of the nights darkness, or of the Winters cold; yet these, as ordinary and necessary consequents, are usually ascribed to the Sun's removal. Hot water removed from the fire, becomes incontinent cold: A ruinous Wall, when its props are removed, falls quickly to the ground: The coldness of the water flows not from the fire, but from its own nature; the falling of the Wall comes from the natural heaviness of the stones, which, without the impediment of a supporter, makes them to fall downward. It is so with God and man; when he withdraws, we become dark as midnight, cold like Ice, we fall to the ground.

These effects necessarily follow his desertion, but not as effects, only as consequents; their proper cause, is neither in God, nor his removall; but in our nature, which of it self, since the fall, is full of these malign qualities.

This kind of providence about our sins, is expressed in words of the active form, of blinding the eyes, and hardning the heart: Not that the Lord infuses any darkness or hardnesh in the heart, which is not its own; but because upon the removing of his illuminating and softning Spirit, the natural blindnesh and hardnesh of mans spirit, lurking before, doth then appear.

The third action of God about sin, is that which I did call, a Judiciall Tradition, when God, as a just Judge, punishes sin by sin; when he gives over men not onely to their own heart, but to the devil and his instruments to be tempted, seduced and drawn away to commit wickednesse with greediness. However all the sinfull actions be immediately the works of the sinner alone, and the upshirring to these actions be from the devil and his instruments, laying arguments, objects and occasions, as baits and snares, in the way of the sinner; yet God, as a just Judge, sending out Satan and men as his executioners, and making way for mens own lusts to break out on the objects set before them: For these acts of Judgment, both in our Text, and oft elsewhere in Scripture, the cause of mens sins, not as they are sins, but as punishments of sin, is ascribed to him, 2 Thess. 2. 10. Because they received not the love of the truth, God shall send them strong delusions to believe a lye. He was to send on them The Man of sin, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and with all deceiveablenesse. The committing of the sin is ascribed to the sinner, who believes the lye; the tempting to it, is ascribed to Satan and his Antichristian Instruments; the sending out both of Satan and Antichrist, the giving over to delusion, is ascribed to God the righteous Judge, by these means punishing former sins. Rom. 1. 18, 21, 24, 26, 28. The wrath of God is revealed against all unrighteousnesse of men; because, when they knew God, they glorified him not as God: Wherefore God gave them up also to uncleannesse. For this cause God gave them up to vile affections. God gave them over to a reprobate minde.
The sinful acts flow from the reprobate minde and vile affections of the sinners; yet God the Judge is thrice said to give them up to these their own sins. Rom. II. 8. God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear to this day. Let their Table be a snare, a stumbling-block, and a recompence to them: Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see. 2 Chron. 18. 22. The Lord hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy Prophets. Many such places there are, where God, as a righteous Judge, is made to give over sinners to the devil, to other wicked men, to themselves, to be led in more and greater sins, as punishments of the former.

Thus far Protestant Divines do go; and all the acts which any of them ascribe to God about the causation of sin, may be referred to one of the three named: All which stands well with the holiness of his Nature, and extreme contrariety to sin. The Papists and Arminians do slander us most unjustly, as if we did blaspheme the holy Lord, in making him the author of sin: All of us ever have abhorred such Doctrine: We never ascribed to God more acts of providence about sin, than the most clamorous of our enemies themselves expressly have done. The three forenamed acts, by Bellarmin and Arminius are attributed to God, in as ample and unadvised expressions as ever fell from the Pen of any of our approved Divines.

I grant, the Libertines of old, and their children the Antinomians this day, do cast out on this subject many abominable Blasphemies: but these were ever detested by all Orthodox Protestants, as the vomit of the father of all lyes and blasphemies; which makes us the more to marvel what these men can mean, who lately here, under the name of M. Archer a famous Independent in his time, have printed the worst and grossest of these Blasphemies. Surely, if such kind of Doctrine be entertained by any of that Party, our Disputations will not stand long at Church-Government; but the world will be confirmed in that opinion which some wise men long ago have given out, That Independency was not Protestants are unjustly accused for making God the author of sin.

This is the blasphemy of the Libertines, and of M. Archer's book, justly burnt therefore.
Sermon preached before the Right Honourable

Why doth the Church complain of these acts of God about her sins? The fourth word to be expounded, is the Interrogation and Complaint, Why hast thou made us to err? The Church being now before God, and laying hold on his fatherly compassion, pours out before him the troubles of her heart. That which troubled them most, was their sins and obstinacy in Rebellion, which they complain to the Lord had befallen them in his great wrath, through his deserting of them, and giving them over to be led away by their own lusts, and Satan's temptations. This part of God's wrath upon them, in punishing their sins with more blindness, and making them err farther from his ways, was their greatest misery, the true cause of all their outward plagues, and a greater plague then all the rest; as we may see in the sixth of this Prophecy, where the Lord, for contempt of the Prophets Ministry, doth punish the body of that people with Spiritual Judgments, and makes their heart fatter, their minds blinder then before: And from this Spiritual evil, he makes all their Temporal desolation to flow, as out of its proper Fountain. Of this misery the people here complain to God, not to lay their sins off themselves, on the Lord; but to witness their deep sense of them, as coming on them through God's just desertion, and deserved judgement: Not to upbraid the Lord with their miseries, but to spread them out before his feet, as their only hope from whose hand alone they expected a remedy.

From the words thus expounded, observe, first; The children of God, in their worst estate, are so familiar with their heavenly Father, as to pour out in his bosom the complaints of whatever misery lies upon them. At this time, as appears by the words both before and after, the people's condition was exceeding hard.
hard. We are all as an unclean thing; our iniquities, as the wind, have taken us away. Thou hast hid thy face from us, and consumed us, because of our iniquities. His zeal, strength and mercifull bowels seemed to be restrained towards them; yet they come before him: and that which troubled them most, their wandering from his ways, they spread it out before his feet, as the matter of their chiefest complaint.

The truth of the Doctrine may be seen, Lam. 4. 1. The Proof member, O Lord, what is come upon us; consider and behold our reproach. In all the Chapter, and the whole Book, there is a familiar complaining to the Lord of all their miseries. Moses and Aaron, in all their tribulation, run to the door of the Tabernacle. Jacob, at the side of the foord jabbuk, in his great fray for Esau, betook himself to weep and pray. David, in his present danger of stoning by his own men, comforted himself in God. Hezekiah spread out before the Lord the railing of Rabshakeh; and, after his desperate sickness, turned himself to the wall to pour out his heart to God. The examples of this practice are innumerable.

The Reason of it is, The Saints interest in God: He is the Reason, their Father. Poor children in distress, whither shall they go, but to their father? Neither sin nor misery will annul that more then natural relation, that supernatural Paternity and Filiation. Though God clothe himself with a cloud in his anger; yet faith will make the soul, with Moses, run through the fire and darkness to him. The Prodigall, in the midst of his misery, resolves to return to his father. The Spirit of Adoption, in our hardest times, will make us cry, Abba, Father. This reason is used in the same place, ver. 16. Doubtlesse thou art our Father, though Abraham be ignorant of us. Ver. 19 We are thine; thou never bearest rule over them. The next Chapter, ver. 8. But now, O Lord, thou art our Father; behold, see, we beseech thee, we are all thy people.

The Use is for our Encouragement to continue this practice with all earnestness and perseverance. If there be any means to draw down a blessing from the heavens on a distressed féd Nation, it is the prayer of the Saints: This is the hand that hath drawn up this sinking Land from the pit of ruin; that hath set our feet on that Rock of safety whereon now we stand. Whatever difficulties are yet before us, by this means, or none else, will they be gotten overcome: Though all other should give over this holy exercise of Fasting and Praying, or turn it in a sinfull and provoking formality; yet it behoves us to keep it on foot, remembering both the express command of the Lord, Call on me in the day of thy trouble, I shall deliver thee, Psal. 50. Lam. 2. 19. Arise, cry out in the night, in the beginning of the watches pour out your hearts like water, before the face of the Lord; Lift up your hands towards him. And your own visible experience: As no people have sown more plentifully this precious seed; so none have already reaped more evident fruits thereof: Be not weary of this good work, untill all our desires be accomplished.

In the next place observe, That the chief part of the Saints complaint to God, is of their wandrings from his ways. Their sins are heavier to them, then all their afflictions.

This is proved from divers Scriptures, Psal. 38. When the Prophets trouble was great, Nothing sound in his flesh, The Arrows of the Lord sticking in him, Gods hand pressing him sore; yet the chief burden whereof he complains, was his sins, verse 4. Mine iniquities are gone over my head as an heavy burden, they are too heavy for me. Psal. 40. 12. Innumerable evils have compassed me about, but mine iniquities have taken hold on me; for them he was not able to look out, his heart failed him: Daniel c. 9. complains of the heavy wrath and curse that was powred out on Jerusalem, and of so great afflictions as had befalln to no Nation under Heaven; yet the first, chief, and longest part of his complaint is, of the sins of their Kings, of their Princes, of their Priests, and whole Land.

The reason of the Doctrine, Sin is the greatest evil, its the fountain of afflictions: Affliction cometh not out of the dust; trouble springeth not out of the ground: Sin is the root of
of it. Also sin is most contrary to the nature of God: Wrath and trouble, even the greatest, the very torments of Hell, are not so; for they are according to his justice. The godly therefore, who weigh things aright in the just ballance of the Sanctuary, esteem their sins much heavier, and more grievous evils, then any they can suffer for them.

The use is for our instruction: Let our complaints be rightly ordered, and our sorrows rightly placed: Beware to spend the most, or best of thy sense, on thy sufferings: Beware to pour out the vehemency of thy passion, the bitterest of thy sorrows on calamities, either private or publike. The first fruits, the flower, the first-born of thy grief, must be reserved for the chief evill. The naturall and kindely children of God, will have more sorrow at their heart for the sins of the Land, than for the desolations thereof: What ever poverty, disgrace, pain, can befall their person, the very wrath of God, suppose the torments of Hell, will not be so heavy, so bitter, so troublesome to them, as their sins, the cause of all these evils.

The third observation, Gods punishing and judiciaall hand in our sins, is their aggravation, and increase of their bitterness: For this is the head of the Churches complaint, That God had caused them to err from his wayes.

It is true, the Saints in Scripture draw comfort from some acts of Gods mercy about sin, as from his gracious directing of its act to a good end. Upon this ground Joseph comforts his Brethren, that not they, but God had sent him down to Egypt: That their selling of him, which they intended for evill, God had ordered it so, that it did become the mean of all their preservation. Also Gods prediction of sin in sundry Scriptures, is made a ground of contentment: All this was done, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled, is a common place of comfort against the treason of Judas, and the wickedness of the Jews. Likewise the Apostles, Acts 4: quiet their minde on this meditation, That God in his eternal counsell, had determined what Herod and Pilate in time had done in crucifying of Christ. Of such acts of Gods mercy, about about our sins, we speak not, be they temporall, be they eternall; but of the acts of his justice and wrath, punishing sin by sin. From these actions of God, we can draw no comfort; but they aggravate the weight of our sins, and increase our grief.

The miscarriage of Absolon, his rebellion and incest, could not but grieve David; but to increase his grief, 2 Sam. 2. 10. God tells him, 1 will do this thing before all Israel, and before the Sun, in that terrible vision, Isai. 6. the Lord, to demonstrate his wrath against that people, sendeth to them a message full of anger, Make the heart of this people fat, and their ears heavy. Their excaëation was in itself a grievous evil; but it was more grievous, when it came as a plague from an angry God. John 12. 39. Gods blinding of their eyes, that they could not believe Christs Word, is brought as an aggravation of their sin, and of the anger of Christ against them, so far, as he went from them, and hid himself.

The reason of this is, That these acts of God proceed from wrath and justice, punishing former sins. Again, they are the means to make sin more sinfull, the person being given over to be carried headlong by his own lusts, and Satans temptations. Thirdly, The punishment of sin in this degree, is much sorer, then if it had been a simple sin, as in the sixth of Isaiah, and elsewhere it appears. No marvell therefore, that men of awakened confidences make it a chief part of their complaint and grief, That God had caused them to err: This being a signe of wrath, and increase of guiltiness, and a forerunner of greater punishment.

The use is first for Caution. To beware of that dangerous error of taking comfort and encouragement from Gods judicial hand in our sins, that is, to glory in our shame, and to joy for what we should be sad. It is to cast off our self the burden of our sin, to whom alone it belongs, on God, whose eyes are purer, then to behold iniquity.

Secondly, It serves for Counsell, to make it our chief grief in our mourning, That we have sain under so heavy displeasure, as to be scourged with the worst of Gods Rods:
Of all the Arrows in God's Quiver, this is the most venomous, To be given over by God to sin; this comes from a speciall wrath, and is a presage of very great misery following. When God's spirit stirred up David to number the people, it came from his anger against Israel, and was a fore-runner of the destroying Angell: The blinding of the people's eyes, Isaiah 6. and John 12. is made an antecedent of a national ruin. When ever we feel this to be our condition, it should be the matter of our most mournful complaint.

The fourth observation will clear the third; it is this, The godly, when their eyes are opened to see their wandrings, they are singularly affected with their judiciaall errours, As here the Church mourning and praying to God, for sin and misery, begins her complaint for these errours, into which, by Gods anger and judgement, she had faln.

Old Israel by Gods judgement, had faln in the grievous errour of civill discord, which cost in two dayes, the eleven Tribes, the lives of fourety thousand men; and in the third, proceeded very near to the extirpation of the twelfth Tribe. When the hand of God was lifted off them, and they began to look back upon their actions, Judges 21. 2. they weeped sore before the Lord, and complained to him of the great mischief wherein they had faln: Though the injustice and obstinacy of Benjamin had been the immediate cause of the disfention; yet they pittied their Brethren, seeing it was the Lords judgement upon them all, that had made that breach in Israel, Verse 15. Ephraim in his pride would needs rebell against the house of David, and have a King among themselves, and Altars of their own making at Dan and Bethel; God in justice gave them over to these fans of continuall sedition and idolatry, till they were totally ruined: He gave them a number of Kings in his anger: Hos. 8. 11. Because Ephraim hath made many Altars to sin, Altars shall be unto him to sin. But when the Lord gave repentance to Ephraim, see how much they are grieved, ashamed, and confounded, for their madness, wherein by the judgement of God, they were were made long to go on, Jer. 31. 18. I have heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus; Surely, after I was turned, I repented; and after I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh; I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I bore the reproach of my youth. The Jews were plagued of God with a horrible blindness of minde, and obstinacy of heart, so that they rejected the Gospel, crucified the Lord of Life, and remain in Rebellion to this day: But when the Lord shall take off the vail of their eyes, and they begin to see their judiciall errours, their madnessse against Christ and the Gospel, wherewith God in justice did plague them; their grief for it will be extraordinary, as it is set down, Zach. 12. 10. They shall look on him whom they have peirced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son; and shall be in bitternessse for him, as one is in bitternessse for his first-born. 2 Thes. 2. The Churches of the Gentiles are in Gods justice, many of them given over to strong delusions, to beleive Antichristian Lyes; but when God begins to open their eyes to see these delusions, their grief and indignation for them is so great, Rev. 17. 16. That they hate the whore, who did seduce and bewitch them; They make her desolate, and naked: They eat her flesh, and burn her with fire.

The Reasons. The Reasons of this Doctrine, are the same which of the former, especially the second. The singular and extraordinary guiltinesse, that is in these judiciall errours, the blinded soul sees them not, while God in mercy remove the cloud, and send in his light; but then the lightned soul beholding the horrible wayes wherein it hath been wandring, such wherein it would never have walked; had it not been led by a powerfull Divell, set on by the permission and commision of a just God; Seeing in these sins a just God, a wicked Divell, and a heart stirred up by extraordinary temptations; by this horrible back-fight is affrighted and amazed, till Faith in the infinite mercies of God, doth calm and settle it.

The Use. The Use is for admonition: Beware of judiciall errours; very often they are never pardoned, but bring on destruction both both temporall and eternall: 2 Thes. 2. 11. They to whom God sends strong delusions, are damned: Isai. 6. 11. When God shut the peoples eyes, and made their heart fat, the Cities were wasted, and the Land made desolate: Before Ephraim and Juda recovered themselves from that snare of rebellion, and came to the repentance spoken of. How many hundred thousands and millions of them did perish both temporally and eternally? And these few whom the Lord bringeth to see, and mourn for their judiciall errors; How great is their grief? How much do they wish to have seen in time their madness, that they might not so much have been plagued therewith?

But what are these judiciall errors which we would beware of? Search the Scriptures, they will make you wise in this very necessary point of knowledge.

For your use, I shall point at some: First, Civill Discord is a sin, and a great judgement; a sin to the authors and fomenters; a judgement to all, as well the innocent as nocent party. Isai. 19. 2. God punisheth the sin of the Egyptians with his plague, I will set the Egyptians against the Egyptians and they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbour; City against City, and Kingdom against Kingdom; and the spirit of Egypt shall fail in the midst thereof, and I will destroy the counsel thereof. The same is the Judgement of Israel, Zech. 11. 6. I will no more pity the inhabitants of the Land, but I will deliver the men every one into his neighbour’s hands, and into the hands of his King, and they shall smite the Land: and out of their hand I will not deliver them. This is the great Judgement that long hath lien upon us; the removall whereof, hath been one chief end of all our late Humiliations: The longer it lieth on, it is the heavier; and all good men have the more reason to cry, with Abner to Joab, upon a lesse occasion; Shall the Sword devour for ever? Knowest thou not that it will be bitternesse in the later end? How long shall it be ere thou bid the people return from following their brethren?

Our Malignant enemies, the only authors of our present Discord, Discord, have to this day denied us Peace in any just and safe terms. If obstinately they will go on in their refusal, we must proceed in our necessary defence, and crave from the God of Peace, that which these children of Discord do deny unto us; and expect from the heaven such a Blessing upon our Armies, as may force them to permit us to live in quietness, when they are no more able to cause troubles. In the mean time, all should continue their prayers to God so to frame the hearts of all men, that the weary and fainting Kingdoms may be delivered, so soon as is possible, from our destroying Discord.

The estate of the world abroad, doth much call us to these thoughts. The Desolations of Germany, farther from any appearance of remedy this hour then Six and twenty years ago, should be exemplary unto us.

If our mindes be so large as to look so far abroad, we may see the whole Western Kingdoms in a greater danger to be swallowed up with the great Turkish Leviathan, than they have been at any by-gone time: We know his head this day is bent towards Christendom. The Bulwarks which were wont to keep him out on both hands, upon our East in Germany and Hungary, upon our South in Italy and Spain, are so much brangled with Intestine and irreconcileable Divisions, that we have just ground to fear what this his Western Enterprise may produce. England oftentimes hath felt the heavy stroke of the Constantinopolitan Arms, when they were in much weaker and far less terrible hands than at this day they are.

If these seem far-fetched fears, look over to the condition of our nearest Neighbours. While we are sleeping, and so soon as awakened, fallen a destroying our selves, the French King hath ingrossed a greater and more formidable power than any of his Ancestors for some hundred yeers did enjoy. No wise man of this Isle will close his eyes at the extraordinary and disproportionate encrease of that Estate.

If there were no other reasons, I believe convincing Demonstrations might be drawn from the present estate of the world.
world abroad, why we should continue to make it one of our special prayers in all these meetings, That we might be so happy as quickly to see in all the three Kingdoms a just and well-grounded Peace. But if the fatal obstinacy of our enemies will force us to fight it out; with all cheerfulnesse let us go on, till they be brought so low, as not to be willing anymore to reject the equitable Offers of both Parliaments.

Onely let this Judicial Discord be extended to as narrow bounds as is possible: Let all our Divisions be with the enemy; among our selves let the bond of brotherly Union continue and encrease. All that are for God, and the welfare of the Kingdoms in the three Nations, are united together by the Covenant and Band of God. All Ages shall call them Curs'd, who, for any imaginable advantage, private or publicke, shall labour to put asunder what God hath conjoyne. The greatest advantages cannot make up the loss which unavoidably will follow upon such a Breach. We know the Prince of Discord, that restless Spirit, will always be stirring up in the humours both of evil and of good men the sparkles of that fire of jealousie, envie, malice, division, wherewith he enflamed the nature of all men, in the brest of our old father the first Adam: But all the members of the second Adam should make it not so much their profession, as their reall care and conscience, to smother these smokes, whenever they appear. I am sure, the wisdom, the piety, the peace of minde, the love to his Countrey, of that man is greatest, who with the greatest sedulity employs himself to cast water on every beginning, on every the least appearance of any Division which Satan may be working in the Parliament, in the Assembly, in the City, in the Army, and, above all, betwixt the Covenanted Nations.

The second Judicial Error I point at, is, Our Ecclesiasticall Anarchy: How great a sin and how great a judgement this is, a little consideration will clear. By this wofull Anarchy, Christ is robbed of a great part of his Kingdom in this Land. That in all the Churches he hath in England, there should be no Government at all, no execution of Discipline.

Most of all, Peace among us selves would be kept with care.
That not one of his Officers should have liberty to keep from his Table, to cast out of his House those that are most grievous to him: That for so long a time he should be hindered to keep so much as one Court in any of his approved Churches in England; it is very strange.

Which of you would not take it for grievous offence, if any would offer to hinder the sitting of the high Court of Parliament at Westminster, or wherever else they please to sit? Yea, it would be taken for a hainous crime, if any in the City or Countrey should stop the least Committee, or meanest Officer whom either of the Houses would send out in their name to execute any of their Orders. What man in the Kingdom would not take it for an intolerable affront, if his servant were hindered to close his doors, and keep out of his house his enemies, or any whom he discharged his presence? What grief would it be to any of us, to be forced to see daily, not onely walking in our house, but sitting at our Table, those whom least we desire? We may judge, by what we feel in our own breasts when such offences are offered to us, what sense Christ will have of them, when his Spirit so long hath been pierced with them. That Christ, by whose power alone this Parliament hath sittent so long time, in de- spite of their enemies; by whose goodness it is that their Sentences get any where obedience; who makes their wills in their private States and Families to be regarded; That he should not be suffered to keep any Court in his own Church, That his Orders should not be regarded in his own House, it is very strange.

Can any man say that ever before it was thus in England these Fourteen hundred yeers, or if it be longer since there were any Churches in this Land? Was ever a totall Anarchy heard of in any Churches, before these late times? Is it any where else this day to be seen in the world? Doth the Pagan, the Turkish, the Popish Princes or States, refuse or delay to grant Ecclesiastick Government to the Churches that live in their Dominions? Have the Independents, the Brownifts, or the Anabaptists, or any of the Heterodox Societies cieties among us, wanted their own Government, since the first hour of their self-ere\tion?

The Judgement of this Error appeareth in three Circumstances.

First, That it is evident to all.
Secondly, That it were most easily amended.
Thirdly, That it is singularly hurtfull.

The Evidence of it may be seen in the confession of all. The greatest and most unreasonable Sectaries, will not deny but every true Church should be without all delay invested with Government: And if you will speak with the men who most have and do retard the erection of the Government desired, they will profess their true intention and desire to see the Church-Discipline established. For this evil Anarchy hath been so oft, by so many of God's faithful servants witnessed against, that now its defended by none.

Concerning the second, The facility of its erection, it is as clear: For, I pray, who are the men that will take it upon them to impede it? Can we at this present, or could we for some years complain of the violence of a seduced Court? Can the blame be cast on any Popish or Prelaticall Faction? Will either Brownists or Anabaptists profess their denial to us of what they long ago have taken to themselves? Who then must answer to God for our shamefull Anarchy for so long a time?

The hurt of it is too too perspicuous. Whosoever will lay the Sword, the Pestilence, and all the Calamities that destroy the Land, on our delay to build the House of the Lord, shall have for him the Prophet Zechariah's direct Warrant, Zech. 8. 10. Before these days, there was no peace to him that went out or came in, because of affliction. For I see all men every one against his neighbour. And if we indeed believe, It is not the strength of men, but the Lord Christ who setteth troubled Kingdoms; What hope can we have, that he will ever settle our State, so long as his Church lies neglected, in so woeful a confusion?

Beside outward Judgements, this Error is the cause of the
the greatest spiritual Mischief. The hedge of Discipline lying level with the ground, makes open doors, yea, invites and calls for all the devouring beasts to prey on the Flock of Christ. From this it is, that so many thousand souls are permitted to perish eternally in ignorance, in profaneness, in Heresies, in damnable Sects, without the least control, or any man's endeavour to reclaim them. So long as the Law permits no Pastor in England to exercise his Pastorall charge on any person, he may well weep and mourn when the devil in his sight plucks away numbers of his Sheep: but with his Shepherds Crook, with the Ordinance of Christ's Discipline, to hold off that Lion it is not in his power.

It is not only the passionate desire of all the Reformed Churches abroad, of all the godly and Orthodox Party at home; but also their confident expectation, That the Honorable Houses, without further delay, will at last set up the walls of the House of God, who now is going on apace, by so many Successes, to ruine their enemies, and to settle the state of their affairs, much according to their hearts desire. The neglect of this piece of Thankfulness may provoke the Lord to repent him of his favours, and to call back in one day, what he had been giving in many.

I point but at one other Judicial wandering, that which usually and properly goeth under the name of Error, the word of our Text; false Doctrine, contrary to the ways of God's Truth. That Error is a sin, and a Judicial one, inflicted by God as a punishment of former sins, we may see in divers Scriptures: 2 Thess. 2.10,11. Because they received not the love of the Truth, for this cause God gave them over to strong delusions to believe a lie. Here Errors are Judgements which God puts Satan to bring on men, for their coldrife entertaining of the truth. And how grievous a Judgment Error is, this and other Scriptures clear: Here it is made a cause of damnation, That they might all be damned who believed not the Truth.

The Socino-Remonstrants have taught our new Masters to extenuate much, and at last to deny the sinfulness and danger of
of Error. They would hide the Vipers sting, till the pretty and beautifull worm be once taken into the bosom, where a little warmed, it makes it quickly appear how innocent and harmless a creature it is.

They tell us, that all sin is in the Will, but the seat of error is the minde: Is not the minde the most high and divine facultie of the soul? Is not the corruption of the best things truely worst? The mindes pollution with the darkness of error, is eminently contrary to the light and truth of the divine nature.

Against this greatest of errors, the excusing of all errors, we should minde the truth of God, who cannot lye: In the place cited, error is made the cause of damnation; elsewhere the Apostle tells us, That false Doctrine eats up and kills the soul, as a Canker, Gangrene or Pest doth the body.

The Apostle Peter is in the same minde, 2. Epiftle 2. He tells us the condition of false Teachers, They bring in damnable Heresies, their wayes are pernicious, their destruction is swift, their damnation slumbereth not: It is as certain, as was the damnation of the Devils, of the old world drowned in the deluge, of the Sodomites: All this is Peters Doctrine.

And this he had from his Master Chrif, Matth.7. 15. Beware of false Prophets. When they have the fairest shew of piety, he that knows the heart pronounceth, They are but ravening Wolfs. Matth. 15. 14. If the blinde lead the blinde, both shall fall in the ditch: If we believe the Lord, a false Teacher doth not onely destroy himself, but draws with him all his blinded Scholers into the ditch of the same perdition.

1 Cor. 12. 25, 27. The Apostle tells us, That the Church is the Body of Chrif, and that Schifmaticks make a Schifm in Chrifts Body: that is, they rent his Body in peeces: they who crucified him would not rent his seamleffe Coat; but Schifmaticks can tear his skin, cut his flesh, rent his Joynts and Members in peeces.
Understand the Language of them who plead for liberty of errors; If you believe Christ, or the Doctrine of Paul attested by Peter, and the rest both Prophets and Apostles, whom I have not time to cite; they invite you to permit ravening Woolfs freely to enter your streets, and tear in pieces all they meet with; to come into your Houses and Chambers, to devour the souls of your best beloved Wives, Sons, Daughters, Servants, and Friends; to lead them all out to a ditch, and drown them; yea, which is infinitely worse, to cast them all in the pit of damnation. These were hard expressions if they were our own, and not our betters, I mean Christ, and his Apostles.

Would you permit any whom you were able to hinder, to rent the Coat of Christ, to tear his Skin, to cut his Flesh, to pull his Arm from his Shoulder? These are the things which too long have been done in our eyes: It were good that such impious actions, so grievous to God, so hurtful to the souls of men, at last were stopped.

Would you count him a gracious parent, who should wink at any who brought into his house Vipers and Serpents, Woolfs and Tigers, to destroy his Children? who brought in Boxes of Pestiferous Cloaths, and boldly spread them on the Beds, and about the Table where himself and family were to sit and lie? This is the office and only exercise of all our Hereticks and Patrons of error.

All Christians are obliged to the utmost of their power to quench the fire of Heresie and Schism; but above all other, we have a special obligation for this duty; we have lifted up our hands to the most high God, vowing to him, in the sight of all the Neighbour-Nations, our endeavours in the sincerity of our hearts, to extirpate Heresie and Schism, and whatsoever shall be found contrary to sound Doctrine, without respect of persons. If herein we should be negligent, would not God avenge our solemn Perjury? If respect to any person should make us ever think of breaking that Bond, and expressly contrary thereto to begin once to tamper about the toleration of errors contrary to sound Doctrine; what what might we and the posterity expect from the hand of the God of Justice and Truth?

Let none object the example of the States of Holland to us in this point:

For first, Where the Will of God is evident, the contrary example of men is not to be regarded.

Secondly, The evil example of one State, is not to be followed against the good example of all other Protestant Churches.

Thirdly, These States were never bound to God by such a Covenant as we are.

Fourthly, In these States there hath been a connivance at Errors by particular Magistrates for their private gain;
but to this hour, was ever any Sect among them, so impudent, as to offer a Petition for a Toleration by Law, when lately some assayed to do it, they repented ever since of that folly.

Lastly, Hath not the Magistrates connivance without any Legall Toleration, so much multiplied Sects among them, that for this one thing (though for many other their renown be great) they have become infamous in the Christian World? The godly among them have been more grieved with this scandalous sin, then with any other; and those of them who are wise, do see their State this day in greater civill danger by this piece of impious policy, and from it apprehend greater hazards of commotion and ruine to their State, then from any other ground: However, the connivence there at Sects, and the multiplication of Sects by connivence, is no wayses comparable to what is among us: but we trust that this kinde of our erring from the ways of God, is near a period, and shall shortly be remedied.

So much for the first part of the Churches complaint.

The second followeth the second, And hardned our heart from thy fear, part of the
Not only they had wandered out of the ways of God in Complaint divers by-paths of sin; but in these sins they were obstinate, their hearts had been hard, the fear of God moved them not.
to repentance: This was a worse evill then the first; so they acknowledge the hand of God, and his fore punishment into it, and of this make a heavy regrate to him.

The originall word that here is turned harden, is but once else in Scripture, Job 39. 16. Spoken of the Osbrige, She is hardened against her young ones, or is removed from her young ones; she leaveth them alone. It signifies two things, To harden, or to remove. Some of the best Latin Interpreters translate it here, Why removest thou our heart from thy fear? The Chaldee Paraphraft takes it so also: but the Septuagint, and the most of other Interpreters old and late, translate it as we have it: The words will bear both; but for shortnesse I shall hold with our own translation onely.

Hardnesse of heart is a metaphor, importing the wilfull, obstinate, and rebellious disposition of the Spirit against the fear and counsells of God: As hard Wax refuseth the flamp, while the soft receives the impression: A hard Wall puts back the Ball, which the soft Ay letteth passe through: A Corflet of Iron holds out the Bullet, which the softnesse of the flesh receiveth.

The way how God hardneth the heart against his fear, is not by infusion of any hardnesse, or any evill disposition into the heart, but by three other actions.

First, By withdrawing of his gracious spirit, whose operation it is that softens the heart, and makes it plyable to the Counsells of God, and subject to his fear: Deut. 29. 9. The Lord hath not given you a heart to perceive, eyes to see, and ears to hear, to this day: That all they had seen in Egypt and in the Wildernesse, had not pierced their heart with the love and fear of God. Of this wonderfull hardnesse of the peoples heart, this reason is rendered by Moses, God had not given them a heart to perceive.

Beside this negative action of God in hardning the heart, he hath two positive; He gives over the heart to its own naturall hardnesse, that it may be more and more hardened: Thus, the Lord hardened Pharaohs heart: He not onely withheld all the gracious motions of his spirit from him, but let his his natural obstinacy work it self to an acquired habit of hardness: And so, what was before natural, became habitual and judicial. This is the judgement spoken of, the twelfth of John, from the sixth of Isaiah: Make the heart of this people fat; for their rejecting of my former counsels, let their rebellious heart become worse and worse, so that thy ministry do them no more good.

Thirdly, God gives over the heart judicially hardned by it self, to Satans tentations, whereby it becomes more blinde, dead, and hard, then of it self alone it could be: He sent evil Angels among the Egyptians, for this evil among others, Psal. 79. 49. 2 Thes. 2. He sends out Satan to work with Antichrist; for to blinde the eye, and harden the heart with strong delusions.

By all this you understand, why the Church regrets it here to God, That he had hardened her heart from his fear: Hardness was natural to her heart, yet they found Gods judgement, causing in justice that natural evil to increase upon them.

From this part of the Complaint, observe, Judicial hardnesse of heart, from the fear of God, in the times of trouble, is the godlies chiefest grief, and complaint to God. The troubles and calamities of the Jews were great at this time, their sins also were great: But behold, here they complain to God more then for either their calamities, or other sins, that God had hardened their heart from his fear, in the midst of all their sins and judgements.

This was it that made the Prophet Jeremy amazed, Jer. The Proof. 5. 3. O Lord, thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction; they have made their faces harder then a rock.

The Reason why this condition of a people is most lamentable, is first, It is a presage of destruction: When strokes humble not a people, and soften not their heart to the fear and obedience of God, then it cometh to this, why, should should ye be stricken any more. After correction is obstinately refusaled, then cometh rejection. 2 Kings 17. 18. God is very angry with the ten Tribes, and removes them out of his sight; the great cause we have, Verse 14. They hardned their necks, like the necks of their fathers, that did not believe in the Lord their God. This same was the cause of the ruine of Jerusalem, Jere. 19. 15. I will bring upon this City all the evil that I have pronounced against it, because they have hardned their necks, that they might not hear my words. Jere. 26. 29. The Lord hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath, because they had hardned their necks, and did worse then their fathers.

Another Reason. This is such an evil as draweth on eternall perdiction after temporall ruine. Rom. 2. 5. After thy hardnedse and impenitent heart, thou treasurest up to thy self wrath against the day of wrath. There is a treasure and heap of everlasting wrath from this hardness. Heb. 3. 7. To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts as in the provocacion: Wherefore I was grieved with that Generation, and swarre in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest: Meaning such grief and anger in God against this evil, as holds out of heaven.

Thirdly, This sin hath extraordinary malignancy in it, though neither eternall nor temporall wrath followed on it: The hand of an angry God, of a working devil, and high degree of corruption, are into it: in its production, all these three have place. Before any be hardned in sin, and become obstinate, the corruption of the heart must be great, and highly advanced: Also Satans hand is in the blinding of the eyes, and fearing with the hot-iron, in stupifying and making senseless the conscience of the hardned person: and God, as a just Judge, putting on the executioner, must be also about this action. So that this hardning is very oft the signe of a Reprobate to whom God shews no mercy: Whom he will he hardens, and sheweth mercy on whom he will shew mercy; albeit its not ever so, as in our Text and elsewhere. God hardens the hearts of some for a time, whom thereafter he softens, and to them sheweth mercy: Yet oft, being the case of Reprobates, and ever very like to it, and in itself a degree to that woeful condition; it affrighteth the godly, when they see it in themselves or others, and becometh a great part of their complaint to God.

The Use is for Exhortation, That we be carefull to grieve and complain to the Lord for this great evil, wherever we see it, in our selves or others. Not only the most faithful of Gods Watch-men in all the three Kingdoms, but also those of the people who by the anointing of God have the eyes of their minde opened to see the Spirituall estate of their own or their neighbours souls, bear witness with an unanimous testimony, that notwithstanding all the Judgments which lie on the Land, yet this hardness of heart is greater and more univerfall then ever they have seen it. This cannot be but the hand of God, adding this Spirituall Plague, as the worst and greatest of all our evils: For this we have great reason to mourn, and intreat the removall of it above all our Woes.

Motives to the Duty. We need no other, then the Reasons of the Doctrine.

If thou finde this evil crept in thy heart, as I doubt not but it lodgeth sensibly in some hearts that hear me; or though the Lord had blessed thee with the tender heart of Josiah, to mourn for the sins and calamities that are already, and to tremble for what further is coming; yet if thou see this Mischief proclaiming it self in the countenances and lives of the most of thy neighbours, as truely an observing and conscientious eye will remark too much of it, wherever he will look, even in the days and places of most solemn Humiliation, when hardness of heart should be banished farthest away; this evil, I say, wherever found, in thy self or others, should be complained of to God: For having in it so much of an angry God, a busie devil, and of a high degree of humane corruption; it being also a presage and certain forerunner, if not remedied, of greater Temporal Judgments then yet we have seen, albeit we have seen and heard heard of as much wo as our fathers in these Kingdoms have felt for some hundred yeers, though all their sufferings were put together: Yet the hardneffe of our hearts, if it continue, will make all we have suffered but the beginning of evils; yea, this hardneffe of heart poisons and envenoms all our sufferings with a cursed quality. Pestilence, wounds, spoil- ing of goods, death, are all sanctified and sweetned to a softened heart; but to a hardned heart they are the first acts of a wofull Tragedie; there is a treasure of wrath, and lake of fire and brimstone at their end attending them.

If we were able, on these days set apart for this end, above all other, to attain the blessing of a soft heart, and the Judgement of a heart hardned by God removed, we would quickly be secure of damnation, we would become certain of the removal of all these Judgements which have very long so heavily lien both on the Church and State, and on the backs, if not of our persons, yet of many in whom our interest is great: we should be assured of heavenly consolations against all evils that for the time were on, or hereafter might befall us. Let it therefore be our earnest endeavour to finde this blessing by the Word, by the Sacraments, by publike by private Prayer, by Reading, by Conference, by Meditation. At this time I will point at some Scripturall helps towards it.

First, believe the Word of the Lord. Gods Word is the means that softneth the heart, like the Sun that melteth the wax, like the Hammer that breaketh the stone, the Fire that softneth the Iron, the watry cloud that moistneth the dry and parched ground. With all care and conscience, set thy heart under the beams of that Sun, the stroke of that Hammer, before the heat of that fire, under the droppings of that cloud. The contempt, the neglect, the misbelief of this holy instrument of the Spirit, is a great cause of all the hardneffe of heart we speak of. Heb. 3. To day if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart. Take heed there be not in any of you an evil heart of misbelief. Who will not hear the voice, or doth hear, but with an evil heart of misbelief, they harden their heart. The Word, which should melt them as the Sun doth Wax, hardneth them, as the Sun doth Clay: that Word which to the believer is the loud voice of the Trumpet of God, to waken them when sleeping, to quicken them when dead; becomes, to the unbeliever and careless hearer, the song of a pleasant voice to sing them asleep, and to keep them sleeping.
To such, the most powerfull Ministry of a Prophet, of an Apostle, of Christ himself, serveth to make the heart more hard, and fat, and dead then it was before; as from the sixth of Iai. and twelfth of John it is manifest. That which to the faithfull is a quickning Spirit, to the misbeliever is a kil-ning letter: What to the one is the power of God to salvation, to the other is but as sounding Brass and a tinkling Cymbals. Let it therefore be your earnest endeavour, in all holy exercises about the Word, private or publike, be it preaching, or reading, or conference, to embrace it with an honest heart,
with all attention, reverence and faith.

Particularly, embrace and lay up in thy heart the promife of a soft heart, as it is let down, Ezek. 36. 26. there the people of God were in a worse condition then we yet: The fury of the Lord was so far kindled against them for their sins, that they were cast out of their Land, they were swallowed up on every side, as it is in the third verse: They were taken up in the lips of talkers, they were an infanty of the people, and the reproach of the Nations, and for all that were not reformed, but continued to profane the Name of God, and to en-crease their provocations, in the midst of all their Judgments: Yet, even then, the Lord doth promise, For my own Names sake, not for your sake, will I do this: A new heart will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: I will take away the stony heart out of your flebs, and will give you an heart of flebs. Let this Word, as a pickle of good seed, be laid up in the heart, it will in time break up to good fruit. This is a part of the new Covenant, as appeareth from Jer. 31 and 32. and Heb. 8. which belongs to us, as to any other,
which we would embrace, humbly waiting till the Lord perform it to us.

A second help to softnesse of heart, will be a Catalogue of fins for which we ought to mourn; for softness of heart is either the same thing, or proceeds in a great part from grief and sorrow for sin; as hardness of heart and impenitency are the same, or are always conjoined.

The second Cure of hardness is, A clear sight of sin.

While the Lords Candle did shine over our head, and we washed our steps in butter; while to all the Neighbour-Nations for a great number of yeers we were a wonder of Prosperity; and with abundance of all Temporall blessings, we had likewise plenty of the Gospel; How did we meet the Lord? Great numbers of all ranks and estates, were obstinate in Idolatry, and known Papists. Of them who professed the Truth, how many were altogether void of knowledge, void of fear, without any conscience of God? The most did pollute the Service and Church of God with manifold Superstitions, and Prelaticall Tyranny, persecuting all who had the least zeal to oppose their Corruptions: True Piety was mocked. The Sabbath, by publike Authority, profaned. Covetousness, Pride, Oppression, Pampering of the flesh, Uncleanness, like a flood, did overflow the Land. In these very times, when the Lords patience is broken off, and he from heaven is revealing his wrath against our wickedness; yet where is our Repentance? How many have an ear to hear more what the present Rods of God do speak, then what his former Favours? How many Popish and Prelaticall spirits have yet mourned for their old ways? How many upon conscience have left any of the named abominations? How great an addition have we made to our old heap of sin? How much have we put to our old treasure of wrath? Rather then to be reclaimed from their ways, Hath not a great part run to the Sword, and covered the Land with more innocent blood, more Rapines and Ravishments then this Isle did see for many Ages together?

Many whom Gods mercy hath separate to the right hand, How do they still provoke the Lord, continuing without grief for their old ways? And sundry of them who profess most Piety, advancing the old unhappie way of this Land, an affectation of singularity and difference from all the Reformed: The bitter Potions of Gods Judgements, have not yet purged out this very evil humour of many stomacks. The vain spirits of this Land made that the peculiar glory of England, which was truely her peculiar infamy, and proper unhappinesse, and the speciall grief of the most godly in the Land: The gloritation of these light spirits was, That England did excell all other Reformed Churches in their Episcopacy and Service-book: also, That the moderation of their King and Prelats was such, that Romane Catholikes might enjoy a sober libertie among them, without all hazard of persecution: Is this humour diminished to this day? Or, with a little change, doth it not predomine yet in many? We must still excell all other Churches in our Government: In place of Episcopacy, we will have a new Popularity: Just the old Brownist of the rigid Separatists, covered with the new name of Independency: For after triall it will be found, that this new and Middle way (as it is called) is really the extremity of the most rigid Separation: That it is not asemi, but a sesqui-Separation: That for the smaller crotchets of the Brownists which they lay aside, they adde more errors, of a worke stamp, which the old Separatists were wont much to detest.

But to sweeten our new eminency above other Protestants, it must be mixed with a Liberty of Conscience; not that, for which the King, Court and Bishops were lately so much cried out upon, The toleration only of Papists, or any one false Religion; but a full and Catholike Liberty for all imaginable kinds of false Religion; much more then to this day was ever required, either in Amsterdam, or Poit, or Transilvania, or any where else where the licentiousness of erring, in the great wrath of God, hath been permitted to dwell. Upon these things the godly would look, not as upon a subject of talking, or an incentive of wrath and indignation against the persons of any; but to be matter of heart-grief, and mourning to the Lord in our secret places.

In the end of this Catalogue of publike sins, thou wouldst have annexed a Register of thy personall provocations: When thou hast brought the Candle of Gods Word and Spirit within thy own house, and within the Cabinet of thy own breast; doubtlesse thou wilt behold so many abominations, both fleshly and spiritual, that will be just cause of watering thy Couch with thy tears, and pouring out thy heart before the face of the Lord, if thou were able, in tears of blood.

A third Cure of hardnesse is Motives to fear.

For the first, we would oft remember the examples given us by God: Who ever thou art, thou hast thy pattern from God: Be thou a Church-man, a Citizen, a Knight, an Earl, a Duke, a Prince; how hath the Lord scourged divers of thy Coat lately before thy eyes? wounded, killed, impoverished, disgraced...
disgraced many, and put others to stand this day on the brink of ruine and worldly misery? Were they the greatest sinners on whom the Tower of Siloam fell? Or they whose blood Pilate mingled with their Sacrifice? The Lords remark on these Judgements was, That except we repent, we shall all likewise perish. The late Judgements which God hath inflicted on many of thy quality, are loud words to thee, that thou mayest fear and tremble; that thy heart may melt within thee for thy sins, lest the Lord make thee a spectacle of Judgement to others, who by the miseries of others wouldst not be taught to repent.

Again, Remember the great mercies of the Lord: For there is mercy with God, that he may be feared. The special means whereby Nathan softened the heart of David, after it had been long hardened in sin with Bathsheba, was a Catalogue of Gods mercies towards him, 2 Sam. 2. I delivered thee out of the hand of Saul; I made thee King over Israel; I gave thee thy masters house; and if that had been too little, I would have given thee more: Why hast thou despised my Commandment? The ointment of mercy is most softning of a gracious heart, when it groweth into hardnesse: Its good to have a Register of Gods favours both to the publike and thy person. Consider all that the Lord hath done lately for the Church and Kingdom. If the Malignant party had prevailed, (as once they were too like to have done) if their Tyranny in Church and State had been established by the overthrow of the gracious party in the whole Isle; what wofull days should have come upon us and the posterity? That the Lord hath heard our Prayers, and from the heaven hath done so many and so great things for us: That we are in so fair a way to have both Church and State settled according to Truth and Justice: That for our persons, we have been guided a-right in the common Cause; that when so many greater, wiser, better than we, have been given over to the counsels of their own hearts, to joyn with the enemy, for their own disgrace and wrack: That the Lord should have kept thy heart strait, and holden thee on that side wherein was Justice.
Truth, and the blessing of God: That in that party the Lord hath taken any service at thy hand, when many, more able, and as willing, have been unserviceable: That thy life, thy limbs, thy estate, are preserved, when this service hath cost many their life, some their limbs, some their estates. These and the like favours would be remembred, for the softning of our heart.

In the third place, if neither Judgements on others, nor mercies on thy self, will move; consider what remediless evils may shortly be the reward of so great a contempt. When Nebals heart grew like a stone within him, the hand of God did in a little time cut him off by death. When neither Judgements nor mercies bring a heart to fear, the Lord usually pours out the full Vials of his heaviest wrath. It is a fearfull thing to fall into the hand of that consuming fire. We would do well to be lifting up our eyes to that invisible Spirit whom the world cannot see; To behold his hand guiding all the wheels of publike and private affairs. Were our State much better setled then yet for a long time it can be; if he be miskent, he can cast down in a moment more then men can build in many yeers. If he be not feared and sought to, he will so crosse and confound the guides of Church and State, that when they are at the end of the Wildernesse, on the very borders of Canaan, he can bring them back to toil in the Wildernesse till they die, without so much as a sight of that Canaan, though once they had come very neer unto it. Albeit the publike did prosper, yet the fearfull wrath of God, for thy hardnesse of heart, may light on thy person. Achan may be stoned to death in the valley of Achor, in the midst of Israel's triumph. The misbelieving Prince in Samaria may see the Plenty, but be crushed, before he taste thereof. Thy hardnesse of heart, if it remain, will ruine thee: What the fury and curse of an angry God hath ever brought on a miserable sinner in this life, think upon it, for shortly it may be thy portion; and, which is infinitely worse, the whole treasures of the wrath to come, a greater then ordinary condemnation for thy impenitency & hardnes of of heart, if thou remain as thou art, cannot but fall upon thee.

The last help I propose, is Earnest Prayer. Sometimes all the former helps will not do it; for the heart is desperately wicked, and incredibly hard, like that of Leviathan.

Job. 41. 24. His heart is firm as a stone, as hard as the nether millstone. When we finde it thus, shall we give over in despair? Not so: For there is yet mercy and power in God to make the rocks flow down, to melt the mountains, to dissolve the Adamant-stones. There is a Warrant, Neh. 9.

Once and again proposed, for the people of God to lay hold on God's mercy and power, in the midst of their greatest Rebellion and Induration, verse 16. Our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks; and hearkned not to thy Commandments: But thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful; thou forsoakest them not. Also in the 29 verse, They dealt proudly, and withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their necks, and would not hear. Yet in the 31 verse, Nevertheless thou didst not forsake them; for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

What heart can be more hard and blinde then Paul's, when he made havock of the Church? yet the Lord made the scales to fall from his eyes, and put in his breast, in place of the stone, a most gracious, soft and spiritual piece of flesh. The spectacle of the greatest induration, the Jews, when the Spirit comes on them, their most obdured hearts fall to the greatest mourning, Zech. 12. Let it therefore be our care, in our greatest hardnesse, to lie at the Throne of Grace, to cry on still for this mercy of a soft heart; who knoweth how soon the Lord may hear and answer? When nothing else can help us, if he himself come down, all will yield to his power. When the King of Glory comes to assault the most stiff and best-closed heart, all doors are cast open to him, Psal. 24. 9. He breaketh the gates of brass, and smiteth the bars of iron in sunder, Psal. 107. 16. When he puts his finger in the hole of the door, the bowels of the secure Spouse will shortly be moved for him, Cant. 5. 4. It must be our C continuall prayer, that the Lord would come to put away the hardnesse of our heart, to enlighten it with faith, to melt it with repentance, to break it with fear; that so it may be a fitted Sanctuary for his perpetuall inhabitation.

If time were not past, there are in the second part of the Text, the Churches petition for the Lords return, sundry things usefull for the present occasion. Look in a little upon the meaning of the words.

The returning of the Lord, is a metaphor taken from finite creatures, that go and come: But properly the Lord cannot move from place to place; for his Essence is infinite; he is essentially omni-present; God is every where, in the heaven, in the earth, in the Sea. Psal. 139. If I ascend up unto heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, thou art there: neither fo onely, but he fills the heaven and the earth, Jer. 23. 24. Do not I fill the heaven and the earth, saith the Lord? But not so, as if when he filled all things, he could be within the circle of the highest heavens: 1 Kings 8.27. Behold, the heavens, and the heaven of heavens, could not contain thee. We have the reason in Job 11.8. The perfection of God is such, that it is as high as heaven, deeper then hell, longer then the earth, and broader then the Sea.

But beware to conceive of this infinite and immense Essence of God, which is in all places, and without all places, as of a bodily substance; for God is a Spirit, and that of an infinite simplicity: take heed of all grosse imaginations of him, lest thou turn him to an idol of thine own making.

Not long ago, Vorstius and some of the Arminians in Holland, began first to brangle with their Problems, and thereafter, to deny with their positive assertions, these ground-stones of Religion. At that time, the zeal of England brake out, to the joy of all the Churches: Then the care of the King, and the very Prelats, was great, not onely to keep Heresies, as hellish vapours, out of England; but to have them suppressed among their neighbours in Holland, with all speed. We hope it shall never be told to posterity, that the zeal of this Parliament was lesse against Errors at home, then the Courts strong one. We tempt God, when we neglect to use the means for doing of that work wherein he hath the principal hand. Because we live in God; Shall we not eat, and drink, and keep our selves from seen dangers? It is the Lord that subdues our enemies under us; therefore shall not our Souldiers fight? The Lords Spirit is the subduer of the spirit of Errour; therefore Assemblies and Parliaments need to have no care of this matter? When Satan reasoned thus with Christ, He hath given his Angels charge over thee; therefore cast thy self down headlong: he replieth wisely, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

Seventhly, God will return for his servants sake, in the most desperate times: When Calamities have wracked the State, when Errour and Obstinate (and these Judicall) lie on the spirits of a people; the faithful expect, believe; pray for favour, upon the ground of their relation to God, still remaining in the mids both of sins and miseries; they are his servants, and he their Lord. The conscience of a desire to serve the Lord, is a Ground of hope in our hardest conditions.

Eighthly, No hope of a deliverance by God in mercy from any Judgement, unless we be willing to serve him as an absolute Master. The greatest enemies of a State, are those, who would evert or enervate the Relation of master and servant, between God and a people; for this Relation is the ground-stone of all the Protection, of all the Deliverance we may expect or pray for from God. Popes, Kings, Bishops, have been striving to be lords over Gods Flock; that ambition hath cost all the three dear. Let Christ alone (by his own Laws, his own Officers, and his own Courts) have the full Spiritual and Ecclesiastick Government of his Churches: The taking of this from him, may spoil us of his protection. Those men that are most carefull to vindicate the right of Christ, are best servants to the State; for they lay a sure foundation of Christs favour and protection to that State wherein they settle Christ as the onely King, Lord and Master of the Church.

Ninthly, Consider the unexpressible benignity of God, choosing out among the children of sinful and miserable men, some to be his own inheritance: That the Infinite and All-sufficient God, who hath need of nothing, and to whom all creatures can add no perfection; in all Ages should delight to have a possession and inheritance among men, as his peculiar treasure, they to be his, and he to be theirs; its a wonderfull love to men.

Tenthly, Gods Inheritance, his peculiar People, his dearest Children, if they will venture on sin, they shall be sure of Plagues both Spirituall and Temporall, rather then any other people of the world: For their sins are greatest, being against a most loving Father: It concerns him in honour and glory not to let them go with their scandalous trespasses: He would be blasphemed, if they went unpunished. Thee only have I known of all the families of the earth, therefore I will punish thee for all thy transgressions.

Eleventhly, The Spirit of Adoption, under great sins, and grievous punishments therefore, moves the children of God to lay hold on their privileges, for the melting of their heart, and bringing them to Repentance.

Finally, The sweetest exercise of a Christian, is the improving of the privilege in hand, The making use daily of this mutual Relation, We are Gods Inheritance, and God is our Portion. A soul truely religious, must give it self up fully to be possessed and filled by God, to be replenished in minde, will, affections, memory, conscience, and every faculty, with the whole fulnesse of God, as an inhabitant, as a due, proper and onely heritor: On the other part, it will claim and lay hold by faith, on the power, the glory, the truth, the mercy, and all that is in God, as its own peculiar portion, as the onely heritage which either in earth or heaven it desireth to enjoy.

But being cut off by time from enlarging these things, I commend them and the rest to your meditation, and the blessing of God.
